

Section 2. Powers and Duties of the President—Continued
Clause 1. Commander-In-Chiefship; Presidential Advisers; Pardons—Continued
The Commander-in-Chief a Civilian Officer	476
Martial Law and Constitutional Limitations	477
Martial Law in Hawaii	479
Articles of War: The Nazi Saboteurs	480
Articles of War: World War II Crimes	482
Articles of War: Response to the Attacks of September 11, 2001	482
Martial Law and Domestic Disorder	484
Presidential Advisers	485
The Cabinet	485
Pardons and Reprieves	486
The Legal Nature of a Pardon	486
Scope of the Power	488
Offenses Against the United States: Contempt of Court	489
Effects of a Pardon: Ex parte Garland	490
Limits to the Efficacy of a Pardon	491
Congress and Amnesty	492
Clause 2. Treaties and Appointment of Officers	492
The Treaty-Making Power	493
President and Senate	493
Negotiation, a Presidential Monopoly	493
Treaties as Law of the Land	494
Origin of the Conception	497
Treaties and the States	497
Treaties and Congress	500
Congressional Repeal of Treaties	502
Treaties Versus Prior Acts of Congress	503
When Is a Treaty Self-Executing	504
Treaties and the Necessary and Proper Clause	505
Constitutional Limitations on the Treaty Power	507
Interpretation and Termination of Treaties as International Compacts	512
Termination of Treaties by Notice	512
Determination Whether a Treaty Has Lapsed	516
Status of a Treaty a Political Question	516
Indian Treaties	517
Present Status of Indian Treaties	518
International Agreements Without Senate Approval	519
Executive Agreements by Authorization of Congress	520
Reciprocal Trade Agreements	521
The Constitutionality of Trade Agreements	521
The Lend-Lease Act	522
International Organizations	523
Executive Agreements Authorized by Treaties	523
Arbitration Agreements	523
Agreements Under the United Nations Charter	523
Status of Forces Agreements	524
Executive Agreements on the Sole Constitutional Authority of the
President	525
The Litvinov Agreement	527
The Hull-Lothian Agreement	528
The Post-War Years	528
The Domestic Obligation of Executive Agreements	529